Helius Energy appoints Projects Director

Biomass-to-power company Helius Energy plc (Helius Energy) has appointed Andrew Wood as Projects Director.

Helius Energy plc has appointed Andrew Wood to the position of Projects Director from Monday 2 February 2009.

Andrew was previously a director of Bronzeoak, where, over a 13 year career, he helped the company to become a worldwide developer of bioenergy and biofuel plants.

John Seed, Managing Director of Helius Energy, said:

“Helius has worked with Andrew on our existing projects and we are delighted to welcome him to the team, where his experience in developing bioenergy plants around the world will be a tremendous asset.”

Andrew Wood added:

“I look forward to the new challenges of developing bioenergy plants to provide sustainable renewable energy that this exciting role provides.”

Notes for Editors

- The Helius Group was established to develop, install and operate biomass fired renewable electricity generation plants. These will help meet the growing need for reliable power from renewable fuels that help to overcome the issues of climate change associated with fossil fuels like coal and oil.
- Helius possesses a significant combination of knowledge of renewable energy markets, biomass energy technologies, biomass fuel sources, project development, implementation and operation of power generation plants.
- On Tuesday 20 January Helius and the Combination of Rothes Distillers were awarded planning permission to build their first GreenSwitch™ biomass combined heat and power (CHP) plant. This will generate 7.2 megawatts of electricity, to be used within the site and exported to the national grid.
